Porter Paints the Health System Red in February

Drive by Porter's two hospital campuses any evening in February and you'll see a commitment to healthy hearts that can be seen -- even from outside the buildings.

Continuing throughout the month of February, Porter's Portage and Valparaiso hospital campuses are decked out in red -- a visible reminder of the need to continue the fight against heart disease.

The red lights are Porter's way of showing support for American Heart Month and the national effort to increase awareness of the dangers posed by heart disease.

"I believe seeing those red lights helps remind us that heart disease touches each and every one of us in some way," says Jonathan Nalli, CEO of Porter health system. "At Porter, we focus on combating the effects of heart disease every day. At the same time, we are working to do everything we can to help people lead healthier lives -- to try to stop heart disease before it starts."
